Read the following Statement from one of Bangor's well-known Citizens:

BANGOR, April 15, 1884.

Some fourteen months since I accidently caught my foot in a chain attached to a sled and was thrown violently to the ground, receiving a severe injury to the right hip and leg. It caused me months of suffering from lameness, stiffness of the joints, rheumatic pains, etc. I tried different medicines, liniments, etc., but received no lasting benefit. Feeling that I needed a blood medicine I procured BELL'S SARSAPARILLA which I have taken, and I am greatly improved in health. It has removed the stiffness of the joints, cured the pain and lameness, and I feel as well as before the accident. Knowing how much this medicine has done for me I heartily recommend it to all.

The Republicans of the Fourth Congressional District will meet in convention in City Hall this morning at ten o'clock to nominate a candidate to the Forty-ninth Congress a candidate for Presidential elector, and select two delegates and two alternates to the Republican National Convention.

Quite a large number of prominent men from Washington, Aroostook, Penobscot counties and from other parts of the district arrived in the city last evening as delegates and the prospects are that the convention under the new portionment will be well attended. The usual trifling wails and all indications point to a thousand horn editors and assistant editors in attendance.

Shipbuilding in Great Britain

Boston Journal.

The March issue of the "Reports from Consuls of the United States" contains documents from the representatives of this country at Glasgow and Newcastle on the subject of shipbuilding on the Clyde and on the Tyne. The report from Glasgow by Consul Burnett shows that shipbuilding has increased from 242,774 tons in 1878-9 to 417,881 in 1883. The reports both from the Clyde and Tyne show that the business has been overdone, and that the present outlook of the industry is not by any means bright. Since 1879 no less than 5,000 men have been discharged which is nearly 10 per cent. of the number employed. The reduction is from 84 to 86 less than a year ago, and at that rate contracts are not coming in. The report from Newcastle on Tyne is more discouraging. The building was very active the past year but of late has been very dull. Building has been overdone. There were over 60 thousand steamers laid up along the banks of the Tyne on the day of the date of the writing of the report, because the owners could lose money by attempting to run them.

The outlook for business the coming season is gloomy enough. The owners say that the carrying trade is overdone. Since last year and in the shipyards there are not worked half or even quarter the forces of last year. Whole yards are lying idle and others the work hours have been cut down and wages reduced. On the first of March the following scale of time wages went into effect: Carpenters, $1 32 per day; joiners, $1 28; spar makers, $1 25; riveters and caulkers, $1 23; smiths and riggers, $1 14; painters, $1 10; fitters, $1 08; plumbers, $1 04; strikers, 80 cents. Piecework was to be reduced 20 per cent under the change. The workmen are intelligent enough to comprehend the situation and peacefully accept the reduced wages.

Such are the reports from the headquarters of iron shipbuilding in Europe. The business is dead because the carrying trade is overdone. Prices are so low for carrying merchandise that it cannot be done at a profit by the English built and sailed ships. New competitors have entered the field from Sweden, Italy and other countries who can perform the service for less money, and yet, in the face of these facts, we have public men and newspapers that declare that if the merchants of the United States were permitted to purchase ships in England the United States would easily regain its share of the ocean carrying trade. Is anything more needed to show how preposterous such assumptions are? Does any sensible man believe that American capital would be raised today to buy ships in England to establish a line to any part of the civilized world if they could be purchased free of duty?

If the shipbuilding industry were overdone in this country, as it is in Great Britain, our free-trade theorists would charge it to that protective system which shuts us out of the markets of the world with our surplus. To what will they attribute this surplusage of ships by the yards of a nation which can build as cheap as the cheapest?

THE GARNETTE INQUIRY.

Washington Cor. of the New York Tribune.

There is some prospect that the Jeannette inquiry will be finished before the close of this week. The committee seems to have come to the conclusion that none of the testimony brought out so far, or likely to be offered, is of such a nature as to warrant a prolonged examination of witnesses. The proceedings, which at one time threatened to be carried on in a way of which nobody could have foreseen the end, have been held in check mostly by the efforts of the Republican members of the sub-committee, Mr. Boutelle, whose experience as a private soldier and naval officer enabled him to outline them with a view to bringing the inquiry to a speedy and practical finish. It is due to his efforts also, that Dr. Collins counsel, Mr. Curtis, was compelled to follow, to a reasonable extent at least, the line of investigation laid down by the committee. This Mr. Boutelle did at the old of Judge Arnold and Mr. Long, the latter of whom has been a faithful attendant at the hearings, and who, as he herself has repeatedly said, is actuated by no other motive than that of defending the memory of her husband from aspersions made by irresponsible persons, mostly on hearsay evidence.

MR. BLAINE'S SLANDERERS.

Charges Proved to be False and Malicious.

Mr. Phelps' Able Letter.

Following is the full text of the able letter of Hon Wm Walter Phelps in which the charges recently published in the New York Sunday Post are shown to be absolutely false and malicious:

WASHINGTON, April 7 1884.

Sir:—On April 7 you wrote to me and charges against James G. Blaine. They are the same which were made eight years ago, and which were, I think, at that time satisfactorily answered. I see no reason, however, why, myself, I have forgotten everything except the most strenuous opposition to my permitting to the facts. I think I may claim some qualifications for this task. I have long had close personal intimacy with Mr. Blaine and during many years have had that knowledge and care of the more important acts which have been reported in public, as one would look to devolve upon friends who have had intimate relations. Upon these grounds I am myself convinced that the charges to-day are without foundation and wholly false. I am conscious that I have some personal rank with you, and you know leaders. Am I claiming too much in asking that there is not one among your readers who would regard me as capable of intentionally misleading the public by any statement of this personal situation—particularly if not demanded under the circumstances? I proceed to consider your charges.

The first thing is the time at which all the others hinge. I give you in your own language, without doing any of your words, the charges against Mr. Blaine:

"In the spring session of Congress in 1869 a bill was before the House of Representatives which sought to give Congressional aid to the Little Rock and Fort Smith Railroad of Arkansas to which one of Mr. Blaine's friends were interested. Every effort was made, and the promises were made, that this particular Mr. Blaine, along with Speaker of the House, sent a message to General Logan, to make the passage of the bill a personal matter. This message was received by Logan, and the bill was passed. Not long after this Mr. Blaine received a large block of the securities of the Little Rock Railroad, and a few months later sold them at a profit of $64,000."

Now, I find the bill was introduced by Mr. Blaine's friends who had in the meantime taken hold of the enterprise, and had offered them some interest, to let him in as a partner. They refused. They did, however, sell him a block of securities on the same terms they sold them to others, and he proved a most fortunate purchase, for he sold them at an advance which, including the dividends, had then taken place, was more than doubled. The transaction was entered into with the knowledge of Mr. Blaine's friends, before the bill was introduced, and was completed long after the passage of the bill. Those who were to receive aid from the bill had no interest in it when it passed the House. Eighty days after the House adjourned Mr. Blaine sold of his

FORTY-EIGHTH CONGRESS—First Session.

Senate.

WASHINGTON, April 28. Mr. Cullom, from the Committee on Railroads, reported an original bill to establish a commission to regulate interstate commerce.

The bill to consolidate the Bureau of Military Justice and Corps of Judge Advocates of the army was read a third time and passed.

The Senate then resumed consideration of the bill to establish a bureau of Animal Industry and to extirpate contagious cattle diseases. The question was upon the motion of Mr. McPherson, to recommit the bill to the Committee of Agriculture and the motion was not agreed to.

Mr. Coke moved to except the disease known as "Texas fever" from the diseases intended to be included in the meaning of the act, so far as it concerned the transportation to market. Thirty per cent of the cattle coming to Chicago last year had been Texas cattle and testimony from Chicago stock yards was that there had been no disease found among them. The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. Plumb withdrew the amendment proposed by the committee which increased the appropriation for the purpose of the bill from $250,000 to $500,000 so as to leave amount as it came from the House.

Mr. Morgan spoke in opposition to the bill and moved to strike out the clause authorizing payment for slaughtered cattle.

Mr. Plumb defended the provisions of the bill but said he had prepared an amendment striking out altogether reference to the slaughter of animals. Mr. Plumb's amendment was agreed to.

Mr. Plumb moved to make the appropriation $150,000.

Mr. Bayard's motion to reduce to $100,000 was disagreed to and Mr. Plumb's amendment making the amount $150,000, was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. Harris an amendment was agreed to confining the operations of the bill to cattle from which there was danger of disease spreading from one state to another.

Mr. Plumb wanted to secure unanimous consent that the debate on the bill should close at [illegible] to-morrow and a vote reached, but it was not agreed to. Adjourned.

House.

A joint resolution was passed for the appointment of [illegible] W. Hyde, of Maine, with others to fill vacancies existing in the Board of Managers of the National Home for disabled volunteers.

The Senate joint resolution was passed providing for the attendance of the two Houses at the unveiling of the statue of Chief Justice Marshall Saturday, May 10th.

Bills were introduced by Mr. Curtin of Pennsylvania, conferring jurisdiction on Federal and State courts to take testimony [illegible] the Commissioner of Pensions.

Mr. [illegible] of Pennsylvania [illegible] providing that [illegible] per cent [illegible] be [illegible] circulating notes of national banks [illegible] hereafter be devoted to the payment of expenses incurred by the United States under title sixty-two, Revised Statutes, and the surplus remaining shall be [illegible] apart and known as the [illegible] redemption fund and be used for redemption of any of the circulating notes of any insolvent association.

By Mr. Cosgrave of Missouri, to authorize the lighting of navigable rivers of the United States by electricity.

Mr. Ellis, of Louisiana, from the Committee on Appropriations reported a bill to provide for the celebration of the world's industrial and cotton centennial exposition.

Mr. Hewitt, of New York, in the course of a personal explanation reiterated his charges that the Secretary of the Navy had violated the law in not covering into the treasury the proceeds of the sale of the condemned vessels. He did not charge that the Secretary had acted dishonestly but that he had not complied with the provisions of the act.

Mr. Calkins, of Indiana, defended the Secretary of the Navy and argued that the provisions of the law had not been violated, that the law required that the proceeds of the sale should be covered into the Treasury. The net proceeds could not be determined until the expenditures had been paid for and this had not yet been done. His deliberate judgment was that Mr. Hewitt's performance this morning was a mere subterfuge. It was a shifting of his position. Last Friday the gentleman had deliberately given the House and country to understand that the Secretary of the Navy was dishonest and corrupt; that what could be more corrupt than that a great public officer should take the people's money and not turn it into the Treasury, but use it in a political election. He knew some gentlemen were so constituted that instead of deliberately walking up and attacking a man fairly they sprung from an alley at the dead of night with the assassin's dagger behind. He did not like that kind of warfare and no man who held the position which the gentleman from New York occupied ought to attack a man indirectly. If he did not make a direct charge common decency and common honesty ought to induce him to keep his mouth closed.

Mr. Hewitt declined to reply to Mr. Calkin's personal remarks, that was in his line. He had intended nothing but to charge that the provisions of the statute had not been complied with.

The House then proceeded to the transaction of business pertaining to the District of Columbia.

The next bill considered was one appropriating $[illegible]00,000 for the completion of the sewerage system in the District of Columbia. Several amendments were proposed, but no quorum voting the committee rose at [illegible] and took a recess until 8 o'clock the session to be for debate on the tariff bill.

BOISTEROUS BREEZES.

A Destructive Cyclone.

DAYTON, April 28. Shortly before five o'clock yesterday afternoon the most destructive cyclone ever known in this part of the country passed over the southern part of Montgomery and Greene counties, devastating everything in its course. An authentic statement is that the cyclone was formed by the union of two light storm clouds from south and north, which immediately assumed the form of a waterspout, rising and descending like waves of the sea, and destroying everything in its way. Its path was fully one eighth of a mile wide, the storm moving over the country like an immense cloud of smoke while everywhere in its course the air was filled with trees and the remains of houses. Forests were mowed down like weeds, fences destroyed for miles and it is estimated that in this county alone at least 25 residences are in ruins, to say nothing of the loss on other buildings, live stock and farm property.

At Alexandersville, six miles south of here, several persons are known to have been injured and one lady is reported to have been killed, while a saw mill, barns and other buildings were destroyed. At Carrollton, Friend's paper mill and other buildings were badly damaged, while it is reported that a number of residences were destroyed. Telegraph lines are down in all directions and roads are impassable. As a large number of houses were destroyed the loss of life must have been heavy.

In the neighborhood of Miamisburg, the damage is heavy. In this city there was heavy rain accompanied by hail but there was little wind. One freak of the cyclone was that in Dayton and five miles south of the city there was rain and hail while still further south there was rain and no hail, and in some places there was neither; in [illegible] Bell Creek, Greene county, 15 houses were more or less damaged, but the occupants generally escaped by taking refuge in the cellars.

From Carrollton the cyclone took a direct easterly course, and its force was not in the least spent when it reached Jonestown, a village of 600 inhabitants, which, it is reported, was entirely destroyed. Meagre telegraphic reports received here state that six persons are known to have been killed, while twenty were more or less injured.

Owing to the country being sparsely settled and the blockaded condition of the roads, accurate details cannot be obtained, but with such destruction of property the loss of life must be terrible. Near Xenia there was considerable destruction. The Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans Home was badly damaged, and the barn, laundry and other buildings destroyed. The hospital and other structures were unroofed.

Between Jasper and Cedar Creek, on the narrow gauge railroad, the damage is great to farm property, and at this point some trains were unable to move on account of the wind. In all directions south and east of here the scene of destruction defies description.

FIRE RECORD.

A Loss of $200,000.

GLEN FALLS, N. Y., April 28. The conflagration which visited this place this morning was the most disastrous for twenty years. The fire which is supposed to have been incendiary broke out in [illegible] Hall building, Glen street, at six o'clock and quickly extended to Little's Opera House, thence to Glen Falls' Opera House and the Presbyterian church. Assistance came from the surrounding towns but before 10 o'clock all the above buildings were ruins. At 10.30 after having destroyed nearly $200,000 worth of property the fire was got under control. Many adjacent buildings frequently caught fire and were saved with difficulty.

Loss of Life.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., April 28. A fire last night at Cedar Springs destroyed $30,000 worth of lumber. Six buildings, including the flour mills, were burned yesterday at Fillmore, Allegan County, and at Holland a woman was burned to death while rescuing a child from the flames.

FOREIGN NEWS.

A Terrible Fire.

PANAMA, April 28. A terrible fire raged here from 11 o'clock last night to 8 o'clock this morning. There was no water available and the market and two blocks of houses were totally destroyed. Loss $150,000. During the fire a large mob, a portion of whom were armed with revolvers and machetes, did considerable plundering and became intoxicated. The soldiers who were called out, quarrelled among themselves, when the owners of the burning property fired on the plunderers, killing several.

Later.

The damage is now estimated at half a million. If the weather continues calm there will be no further danger. Some houses were knocked down to check the progress of the flames. Most of the buildings [illegible] wooden structures, and [illegible] stores of petroleum and spirits [illegible] considerable [illegible] soldier was [illegible] An Italian fell into the flames and was consumed. The Chinese residents suffered heavily.

The three year old bay filly "Busy Body" was purchased by Lord Alington for 8,800 pounds. The total amount realized at the sale was 39,270 pounds.

Arrest of Newspaper Men.

PARIS, April 28. M. Rochefort, writing in regard to the reported arrest in Egypt of James J. O'Kelly, the well known newspaper correspondent, says: Mr. O'Kelly, before starting for the Soudan as correspondent of the New York Herald, obtained permission to cross the lines of both Egyptians and Soudanese in order to exercise his duty as newspaper correspondent. My eldest son, who accompanied him as correspondent of the Intransigeant, [illegible] was also furnished with credentials.

The English Government [illegible] to prevent an exposure of the disastrous situation on the Nile stopped the two men and forbade their proceeding. M. Rochefort then suggests that the letters found in Mr. O'Kelley's [illegible] to Mahdi were only evidently as a newspaper correspondent.

Foreign Notes.

LONDON, April 28. The Cologne Gazette says Premier Ferry will demand binding pledges of England to renounce the idea of annexing or establishing a protectorate over Egypt and if England refuses to give pledges France will abstain from the Egyptian conference.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE. Robert L. Washburn attempted suicide shortly before noon yesterday by shooting himself in the breast with a revolver. The deed was performed in a stall at Aiken's restaurant on Central street and created quite a sensation. City Marshal Reed came and had the man removed to his room at the American House, where he was attended by City Physician Robinson. The ball had entered the right breast, but struck a rib and glanced off, so that the wound is not necessarily dangerous, although quite serious. Washburn is by trade a woods blacksmith, having been in the employment of J. W. Palmer & Sons for some years, during the lumbering season, and passing the summer in Bangor, at the American House. He has been on a protracted spree of late, and not long since was thrown from a carriage, striking on his head, which latter circumstance, coupled with the effects of much liquor, is thought to have affected his mind. Washburn has no relatives in this vicinity and has stated he came from Miramichi, N. B.

AMUSEMENTS.

Fanchon.

Maggie Mitchell was greeted by a fine house last evening when she appeared in her greatest success Fanchon, the Cricket. The good audience was thoroughly pleased and manifested its approval by repeated bursts of applause. She has lost none of that vivacity which made her such a favorite in past years and is the same witch that has so many times captivated the hearts of audiences. A growing sense of her naturalness begins to dawn on the interesting eye for the beautiful [illegible] of the twin Fanchon until the romping [illegible] who is mocked and ridiculed by the other peasants, becomes an object to admire and then to love. The shadow dance is Miss Mitchell's own creation and there seems to be a real companionship between her and the shadowy figure to whom she confides her thoughts. Her support is of [illegible] excellent character and adds much to the play. Miss Mitchell will always be sure of a warm welcome when she returns to Bangor.

Thursby Concert.

The Thursby Concert troupe arrived in this city last evening having come from Bath where they gave a concert on Saturday evening to a fine and delighted audience. Last evening Miss Thursby, accompanied by her sister and Mr. Mapleson, attended the Opera House to see Maggie Mitchell in her famous character of Fanchon. They were invited to a box by Manager Owen and were much pleased by Miss Mitchell's charming acting, this being the first time that Miss Thursby had chanced to see her. They were also warm in their praise of the beauty and management of our Opera House. They have just returned from an extended tour to the West and South, having given concerts as far North as Duluth, as far West as Topeka, Ks., and as far South as Norfolk, Virginia, and have met with the greatest success. To-night closes her engagement for this season, this being the one hundredth performance. Miss Thursby was much pleased at being able to arrive here a day in advance of the concert as she has long desired to visit our city having heard so much in its praise. To-night our music loving citizens will have a rare opportunity of listening to the queen of the concert stage, and her appearance at this time is also fortunate for those who will be present in attendance upon the conventions as they will be afforded a treat such as they rarely can obtain.

B. McAuley.

The popular comedian, Mr. B. McAuley, will appear at the Opera House to-morrow night in his unrivalled character of Uncle Dan'l in "A Messenger from Jarvis Section," and on Thursday evening in "The Jerseyman." Seats are selling well for both nights.

Agricultural.

Concerning Fertilizers

We copy the following discussion recently had before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, in Boston, knowing that it is a matter that our agricultural readers are deeply interested in at the present time. The gentlemen who took part in the discussion are all well known as scientific and reliable agriculturalists.

… L. Wetherill, who opened the discussion, said that the first and best fertilizer, the one always to be used, is stable manure, from cattle fed on good hay and … It has been said that the manure from cattle fed on linseed or cotton-seed meal is worth as much for fertilizing as … meal, but the speaker did not believe it, though he suspected that cotton seed meal might be used by manufacturers of fertilizers as an ingredient in their manures. He wondered that farmers did not use it directly. Commercial fertilizers should be used with discretion. They can be used with good economy in connection with stable manure. When planting corn, for instance, it is a good plan after stable manure has been spread and plowed in to put a little superphosphate in the hill, mixing it with the soil. Corn started in this way ripened from ten to fourteen days earlier than that receiving the same treatment except the superphosphate, and the case was the same with potatoes.

There is a great liability of fraud in the composition of artificial fertilizers. The analyses by Prof. Johnson of the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station, … artificial fertilizers, most of great value, … the cost of the materials, the price at which the fertilizers are sold and the real value to the farmer, the real value being … in most all cases from $6 to $8 per ton less than the price guaranteed by the manufacturers. Prof. Goessmann's experiments at the Massachusetts Agricultural College are developing similar facts … materials used in artificial fertilizers … but the question for farmers is whether they can afford to pay the … prices asked. An instance … was developed by Prof. Atwater of Connecticut, who prepared several parcels of fertilizers with greater or less quantities of the most costly material, nitrogen. In many instances pure superphosphate without nitrogen produced better corn than when nitrogen was added … If you can use what you want and adapt it to your soil without the … use of substances not needed you have … of importance.

The speaker said that on his own farm plaster has produced a good corn … the artificial fertilizers that cost a great … more, the corn had to be weighed in both cases. On his farm … plaster worked wonderfully … producing three tons of hay to the acre, but on an adjoining farm it was worthless … Prof. Anderson of the Highland Agricultural Society says that … in understands the action of plaster … applying commercial fertilizers, every … knows or should know better than chemists what his soil needs … farm or garden and find out what it requires. The brains should work with the hands. The speaker's farm does not require potash. The reason why more commercial fertilizers are not used by farmers is that they get so little return … who have made … of fertil… … to buy the potash and other elements … artificial fertilizers in bulk and mix them themselves, thus getting their fertilizers cheaper and purer.

… Wilson said that the topic before the meeting is the most useful branch of study for all cultivators. It is most interesting to see how nature fertilizes a soil by returning the material taken from it by the growth of plants. Plaster is not a fertilizer, a fertilizer is that substance which … into the element that have been taken from the soil. Plaster is a negative salt, composed of sulphuric acid and lime, the two cheapest substances of their respective … either of which alone would destroy any crop. The standard of value in fertilizers is nitrogen. Four fifths of the … that we draw in at every breath is composed of this element, and three per cent of all flesh is composed of the same … in different forms, but it is also … in decomposing animal matter … vegetables decay, the nitrogen that … contain immediately becomes salt … support other vegetable life, but … mineral substances is not … to support other animal life until it has been through certain changes. When manure is ploughed into the ground … the changes necessary to convert it into plant food cannot go on. These changes also require the presence of some alkaline salt, such as potash or … lime being the cheapest, but … of potash would … better …

The object of these meetings is to encourage the study of this question, which lies at the foundation of all fertilizing, so as to enable cultivators to become independent of manufacturers of fertilizers, each man making his own and making them good. The actual … of commercial fertilizers is greatly less than the manufacturers ask. Sulphate of ammonia … be obtained from the gas works … three to four cents per pound and ground South Carolina phosphates at … low prices. A greater diversity of scientific knowledge is required in farming than in any other calling, and it … pay such knowledge. One can hardly … anything come amiss except some of the modern isms, but nothing is more important than … It is absolutely indispensable.

John B. Moore thought Mr. Wetherell was right in saying that the working of plaster on land is not understood. It requires 10,000 parts of water to dissolve one part of plaster. A tract of land may show wonderful results from the application of plaster, but the effect will cease after a course of years. Mr. Wetherell mentioned an instance where the effect of plaster had lasted for twenty years. Mr. Moore said that it might last more than twenty years, but it would cease at some time. It produces the best results on rocky, springy soils, and has little effect in the vicinity of the seashore. At his farm in Concord the only benefit derived from it is in fixing the ammonia about manure heaps.

Mr. Moore said that he had been asked by dealers to test their fertilizers by the ton, on condition that he would give them certificates of their effects, but if he gave such certificates the dealers would, on the strength of them, sell to his friends what would not give crops, and he has invariably refused to test fertilizers on such conditions, and hoped that every one present would do the same, and let them stand on their own merits. He believes in mixing fertilizers himself, but there is a difficulty in dissolving bones in sulphuric acid, a piece as big as your finger will not dissolve; they must be ground first. It is necessary that farmers should understand the working of fertilizers better than they do. He has used large quantities of fertilizers but makes but little provision to buy nitrogen, for he believes that by stirring the soil he can get it free of cost. It makes leaves and stalks, not seed; for seed we must have potash and phosphoric acid. He uses large quantities of steamed bones, which he gets pretty cheap; you can rub a hard bone to powder between your fingers after it has been subjected to the action of steam under high pressure. You may get little benefit from those bones the first year, unless they have been dissolved, but you will get it sometime.

In farming there are three points to consider: First, the soil; second, the crop; and third, the material to put on. Dr. Goessmann has lately made the first analysis of asparagus, and to his astonishment the ash of the roots and stalks shows fifty per cent of oxide of potash, which would lead to the conclusion that a crop of asparagus must have potash in the soil. You can get knowledge in regard to fertilizing the soil only by actual experiment and the use of a good deal of brains. The speaker has made a good many mistakes in this direction, but he has learned as much from them as from his successes. A market gardener told him that he put a ton of superphosphate on an acre without producing any effect, but, on inquiry, it proved that he also put on thirty cords of manure, and you can't pack crops thick enough on the land to take out so much plant-food. The reason that market gardeners find it profitable to use so much stable manure is that they need its mechanical action on their soils, which they cultivate year after year, supplying no decomposing vegetable matter, as is done when grass is broken up and therefore they must supply it in stable manure, which they get cheap and use in a half-decomposed state.

E. W. Wood said that ordinary market gardeners use commercial fertilizers, though Peter Henderson recommends a partial use of them. They want a sure thing, and they know from past experience that they can depend on stable manure. There is no business where so much fraud has been practiced as in commercial fertilizers in the last twenty-five years. These are most contemptible frauds. Prof. Mapes analyzed a fertilizer which was sold for $52.50 per ton, and proved to be worth $57, but analysis in later years showed a gradual deterioration, until it was worth only $7 or $8, but the selling price remained the same as at first. Dr. Nichols had found not one sample in four pure. The speaker bought some superphosphates, and tried out his rows so as to test them, and the first year they were satisfactory, especially with corn, but the next year his crops did as well without as with phosphates. In the town of Sutton, the farmers used commercial fertilizers one year with such good results that the next year they paid $10,000 for them, with little benefit. Much, however, depends upon the season. If the agricultural college could manufacture fertilizers, or in some way assure their purity, it would be a great benefit to farmers.

John S. Martin said that he had used only one fertilizer for many years, and gets better crops than the farmers who use only stable manure. Mr. Wetherell said that when a fertilizer works well the first year, but not afterwards, the season may have something to do with its success or failure. It is a question whether farmers can continue to use commercial fertilizers for a series of years without stable manure. In Germany they think they can, but the speaker felt doubtful about it and thought it better to use both if possible. The native town of Mr. Martin is a very interesting one. The land where the speaker's father used plaster to so much advantage was high, springy land, good corn land. He had heard one man speak of good effects from sulphuric acid applied to the soil. He knows salt to be a fertilizer.

H. W. Wilson suggested to those who use large quantities of bone manure the question whether they get its whole value. It is subject to saturation with water, and to loss of the liquid portion, which is everywhere recognized as containing the greatest part of the valuable matter. Where the drainage of manure is used, three times the great results have been realized as when only the solid portion was used. An excellent way to apply it is by underground irrigation. There is no household but accumulates some bones during the year, but if we attempt to dissolve them, the fatty matter resists the action of acid, and they must be burnt, but in this way they loose their nitrogen. If they are moistened with water, and then placed in sulphuric acid diluted with four or five parts of water, burnt bones can be dissolved. Commercial fertilizers furnish all the elements of seeds, but when would a plant be without stems and leaves? We want a perfect fertilizer to make not only seed, but leaves and trunk. In trees, centres are … to the composition of seeds. In the … structure of plants every cell is … enveloped in a tissue composed of nitrogen. No fertilizer will work continuously unless all the elements are provided.

Mr. Moore said that actual experience of a large number of the best farmers in the United States proves that if they furnish potash and phosphates they get better results than if they pay their money for nitrogen. Nothing makes a plant grow faster than nitrogen. Nitrate of soda gives a … color … to lawns … very quick … but it must be applied when the plants are making a vigorous growth, or are about to, if applied in the fall it will be thrown away. Mr. Wilson spoke of the excellent effect of coal ashes in extracting nitrogen from filthy water. The nitrogen turns first into ammonia, then into nitric acid, and then into soluble nitrates, which wash away. This explains the action of nitrate of soda.

"Man's Inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn," wrote Robert Burns. He was probably fresh from the hands of the village barber whose dull razor had pulled Bobbie's beard so as to unclinch some of the hairs near his wisdom teeth—you know how it is yourself, perhaps! No one can accuse us of inhumanity to man, for the moment we find that a razor pulls, we discard it and sell it to some rural barber. The beard disappears from the face as easy as the breath from a mirror, under the skillful hands of any of the two professors at our Tonsorial Rink.
